

Synopsis Statement on the Resolution Adopting the revised Structural Document for the Richland Economic Development Board

Thank you for considering the resolution on proposed revisions to the Richland Economic Development Agreement / Structural Document.

Richland Center and Richland County have long collaborated with the private sector to offer economic development services. Prior to 2009, the County and City funded a private economic development entity, "Richland Chamber and Economic Development Alliance". There were disagreements between the Mayor and Economic Development at that time and the Mayor convinced the City Council to defund Economic Development. Within a few months the County Board followed suit and defunded Economic Development.

As a result of the aforementioned actions, Richland County was falling behind the progress of other surrounding counties, so Southwest Partners, a community development organization, restarted economic development as a private effort in 2013. Over the next few years, SW Partners raised private funds and contracted with SWWRPC for a part-time ED specialist to re-establish an economic development effort in the City and County. The new effort was called "Community Prosperity Alliance" or CPA and was funded primarily by private donations and eventually some funding from the City and the County. It was a part-time effort that was working hard to re-establish economic development but was falling short of the full restoration of this important initiative.

In 2018 talks began between SWP, Richland County, and Richland Center to establish a more permanent and full-time presence for economic development in the City and County. The plan that was agreed upon was a collaboration between three sectors: Government, represented by the City and County, the private commerce sector represented by businesses in the area, and the civic sector, represented by community development entities with a proven track record. I, Mike Breininger, was charged with drafting the structural document and naming the entity.
